

Coastal Carolina

Combined Federal Campaign

Dear Colleagues:

My name is Major Nathan Molica, United States Army and I bring you greetings on behalf of the US Army Corps of Engineer Charleston District. It is an honor and a privilege to serve as the Executive Officer for the US Army Corps here in Charleston and help lead more than 275 great employees as we serve the many Federal organizations, citizens, businesses, and communities of Coastal South Carolina.

I am especially proud of another role, and that is serving as the 2015 Coastal Carolina Combined Federal Campaign (CFC) Chairperson. Both the CFC and the US Army Corps of Engineers have a rich tradition and history of serving both the Federal community and the general public, and I am humbled and excited for the chance to bring these two forces together for an even greater cause.

As government employees, we are afforded benefits and securities that many others do not have. In fact, many of the residents in the Coastal South Carolina area face challenges every day, whether they're customers, friends, neighbors, relatives, or even co-workers. Through our joint efforts with CFC, federal employees are in a unique and favorable position of being able to help those in need.

Annual CFC contributions are the perfect opportunity to pay it forward and lend support to many worthwhile charities, organizations and social issues including the military, homeless population, educational endeavors, animal humane societies, or environmental issues, to name a few. The theme of this year's campaign is "Give for Good." This simple yet powerful statement asks each of us to embrace our common values and search within ourselves for a heartfelt way to give back. With several convenient ways to give, pledging to CFC is simple and takes only minutes to complete.

Last year's campaign raised more than $1.25 million in employee pledges, but I know, with your generous hearts, we can surpass last year's total. With thousands of approved charities supported by the CFC, I'm certain you'll find one or more non-profit organizations that will speak to your heart.

I want to thank you for reflecting on where and how you can make a difference, and I encourage you to Give for Good.

Sincerely,

Major Nathan Molica

Deputy Commander, Charleston District US Army Corps of Engineers

Chair, 2015 Coastal Carolina CFC
